NOTE FROM THE PASTOR:

Dear Parishioners,

I read a book recently in which the author makes a striking statement. He was addressing the claim, uttered by a Catholic, that one need not be religious in order to be a good person. The author answers, "Certainly that's true—although being religious does help." I am more inclined to believe that being faithful to our true religion is not only helpful, but essential to being a morally good person. We need Jesus to be righteous. Apart from me you can do nothing, He said once. (John 15:5). Faith in Jesus, then, is necessary. The Word of God points out that without faith we cannot please God (Heb. 11:6). Moreover, we're told, the righteous person lives by faith. (Heb. 10:38). The implications are that if you are righteous you live by faith. No faith no righteousness. Religion is the practice of one's faith.

Furthermore, Jesus spoke of the necessity of the Most Holy Eucharist in John 6: Unless you eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His blood you do not have [divine] life within you. (v. 53). The Church has always taught that going to Mass on Sunday and Holy Days of Obligation is essential. The Eucharist is the summit and source of the entire Christian life, said Vatican II. (Lumen Gentium, 11). To miss Mass without a very good reason, such as illness, is a mortal sin. (Catechism of the Catholic Church #2181). Therefore, if one misses Mass through his own fault he must confess that sin to a priest before returning to Holy Communion. All of this seems to indicate that faithfulness to the Eucharist, i.e., regular attendance at Holy Mass, is central to moral life. Hence, the attitude that one can be a good moral person even if he or she is not "religious" may not be so "certainly" true as the author would have it.

What about atheists? I use the term 'atheist' to refer not to the simple native in the wilderness who lives a primitive existence apart from civilization and has never been exposed to religion, nor do I refer to the contemporary person in our society who struggles internally with occasional doubts about God's existence. The atheist I have in mind is the modern man who has articulated to others that he does not believe in the existence of God. This person has pondered the issue and has publically committed to a non-believing, god-less way of life. Some may argue that they know of atheists that are righteous. I am not sure if there are any. Perhaps the atheist may do what seems to be a good deed or two. However, his or her whole life stands against God by virtue of their refusal to believe. God is love. His very substance is love. How can a person be a person of love—a morally good person, without God? Moreover, God is truth. The atheist denies God and hence, he denies the truth. For this reason Sacred Writ says: The fool has said in his heart that there is no God above. (Psalm 15).

When you think about it, atheism is really illogical. The typical atheist explanation of the origin of the world is this. There was nothing. Then an explosion happened: the Big Bang. Then evolution took over, randomly organizing all of the disparate matter into the thoroughly organized patterns of being and life that we see all around us. Does this make sense? How can something (the explosion) come from nothing, that is no thing? Moreover, how can evolution, undirected by divine intelligence, generate the immense order and precision that we have in the cosmos? In order to have order there must be an orderer. If you enter the rectory and pass into my office and see order within the four walls, you rightly conclude that someone must have put the office in order. It cannot organize itself randomly. God's fingerprints are all over the universe. Human reason is fully capable of seeing that there must be a Creator of this creation. It is no wonder that the Apostle said that what can be known about God is evident because ever since the creation of the world, His invisible attributes of eternal power and divinity have been able to be understood and perceived in what He has made. As a result, they have no excuse, those who deny the truth about God. (Romans 1:20).

God bless you!

Fr. Eric
