NOTE FROM THE PASTOR:

Dear Parishioners:

A good woman that I know from another parish recently left the Catholic Church because of the Church's teaching on homosexuality. Her relative has this condition and she felt that the Church is condemning someone that she loves very much. She is mistaken. The Church condemns sin not the sinner. We hate sin because we love sinners. Let us briefly consider this very culturally relevant issue.

Carrie Gress writes, "There is an ongoing discussion about how to best help those with same-sex attraction (SSA). The popular consensus—even among many in the Church today—seems to be that the best thing to do is to accept them, let them live out their passions, and celebrate their diversity. Their lives are just like those of heterosexuals, or so the argument goes." However, she points out, this position overlooks the tragic reality of the gay lifestyle. ["Symptoms, Causes and Loving Those with Same-Sex Attraction." National Catholic Register (July 7, 2017).]. Michael Hobbes, who participates in the gay lifestyle, indicates that gay people are much more likely to commit suicide than heterosexuals. The figure is as much as ten times higher in certain studies. He argues, "We're twice as likely to have a major depressive episode. Gay men everywhere, at every age, have higher rates of cardiovascular disease, cancer, incontinence, erectile dysfunction, allergies and asthma—you name it, we got it." ["Together Alone: The Epidemic of Gay Loneliness." Huffington Post (March 2, 2017).].

Hobbes rejects what he calls "minority stress" as the root cause of gay men's distress. The heart of the issue, he claims, is a deep loneliness that cannot be mollified through homosexuality. Even as the gay community celebrates their recent social victories, Hobbes states, "the [high] rates of depression, loneliness and substance abuse in the gay community remain stuck in the same place they've been for decades." Christopher Stults, who studies the differences between gay and straight men at New York University, is quoted by Hobbes as saying: "We want to have man after man, more muscles, more status, whatever brings us fleeting validation. Then we wake up at 40, exhausted, and we wonder: Is that all there is? And then the depression comes."

Daniel Mattson is recovering from his addiction to homosexuality. He speaks of his journey in his new book Why I Don't Call Myself Gay: How I Reclaimed My Sexual Reality and Found Peace. He looked for happiness in the gay lifestyle but found disillusionment and emptiness. "We don't really understand what will make us happy," Mattson writes. "Being loved by God and being able to love Him in return is where true joy resides." He continues, "All of the sex, all of the porn, all of my hopes and dreams of love and earthly happiness, were a two-dimensional caricature of happiness. Happiness comes when we finally know who we are, why we're here, and where we are headed. I finally know that to have sex with a man really leads me away from true happiness." Mattson concludes, "Thanks be to God, I know that now. That was a hard lesson to learn, but I'm glad I learned it."

How then, can we best help these men (and women, too, although their issues are somewhat different) struggling with SSA? What is the prescription that will bring them true healing?

The prescription is Jesus Christ, blessed be His Name. In His great love for us, Jesus gives us [if we accept it] God's grace and the gift of chastity. What exactly is chastity? Chastity is one of the fruits of the Holy Spirit. It is a call by God to each of us to imitate the purity of Jesus Christ and to use the gift of our sexuality as God would have us use it. Chaste sexual behavior always has two components: first, the act should be between a validly married couple—a man and woman. Secondly, the act should be open to life. Therefore, artificial contraception is immoral because it prevents new life. This is the constant teaching of Jesus Christ. It should never be considered to be mere religious discipline like the ritual washings of the Pharisees. It is divine law. It is not subject to change. It is not determined by the latest Gallup Poll.

Chastity is an important component of purity. Purity is ultimately not about what is forbidden. As Archbishop Charles Chaput states, "Given the hypersexualized nature of today's culture, when we think of purity, we usually think of sexual purity. And thinking of sexual purity, we typically focus on abstinence. So purity somehow transforms into not experiencing a thing we want to experience. This is a distortion. Purity is about wholeness or integrity. It means that the body, mind, heart, and soul are rightly ordered toward God. Every element of who we are is doing its part to bring us to union with God, which is our ultimate happiness." [Strangers in a Strange Land (2017).] Chastity is ultimately about what gives life and joy to the human heart now, and also forms part of our response to the love of Jesus that leads us to eternal life. Recovering homosexuals would agree.

God Bless You!

Father Eric
